Magic Moment

Shanghai – Beijing Bullet Train

The Shanghai – Beijing High Speed Railway opened in June 2011, providing a vital connection between China's two main cities. The maximum speed is nearly 200 miles an hour and the fastest journey time between the two cities is now under five hours to complete the distance of 820 miles.

The railway is a huge construction project costing around $32 billion. Much of the line is raised on pillars, with one continuous elevated section of over 100 miles being the longest bridge in the world.
